

Philanthropic Support

Corporate and philanthropic trailblazers power the National Organization on Disability's mission of equitable employment opportunity for people with disabilities. Here's how to join them.

Advocacy:

Our Policy Roundtable is led by NOD's newly appointed Policy Ambassador, Board Member and former Congressman Jim Langevin and Tom Ridge, NOD Chairman Emeritus and former Pennsylvania Governor.

The Policy Roundtable is comprised of 17 of the nation's largest disability organizations and addresses reforms that make it easier for people with disabilities to work, earn competitive wages, and save money.

Sponsorship Opportunities:

Publications:

The Disability Inclusion in the Workplace Toolkit: An introduction to the basics of disability inclusion in the workforce, it includes a glossary of terms, resources, and workplace etiquette.

The Insights Report: With trends and effective practices culled from the more than 225 companies who submit the annual NOD Employment Tracker™.

Webinars:

Sponsor one or all of NOD's webinars on new and innovative workforce inclusion practices, digital accessibility, Tracker findings, neurodiversity and more.

Live Events:

On September 26, in New York City, join other disability inclusion leaders for the event of the season. Showcase your dedication to our mission of disability inclusion and tell your story!

Innovation:

A critical component of NOD's strategy is innovation: identifying gaps in disability employment policy and practice, and then designing, testing, and evaluating new approaches to job creation at scale.

Since 1994, NOD has undertaken three innovation projects whose collaborators included school transition programs, employers, the military, universities, and service providers. Each project was made possible by a diverse array of individuals, foundations, and corporate funders.

In 2024, we are proud to launch two projects focused on mental health and digital accessibility with inaugural support from Target, Hershey, and The Coca Cola Foundation.
